Graduate courses expire after 7 years for master's level students and 10 years for doctoral level students. Some individual programs may allow less time. This form can be submitted for approval by the Graduate School if your program indicates that the content for expired coursework has not changed significantly enough to justify retaking the course(s) prior to graduation OR the student has demonstrated competency in the relevant coursework. This determination should be based on a comparison of syllabi and/or assignments for previous and current course(s).

Attach a memo to this form detailing justification for validation of coursework.
